Rumors, Race and Riots

Terry Ann Knopf

"Scholarly and well documented...definitely worthwhile," said the Columbia Journalism Review, of this systematic analysis of how a racial conflict can be ignited and intensified.

"Provocative," said Variety, are Ms. Knopf's conclusions concerning:

- the existence of a white suburban grapevine analogous to a ghetto grapevine in times of racial unrest;
- the specific link between media reporting and the outbreak of racial violence;
- the use of rumors by public officials to justify immediate action;
- the function of rumor control centers in combatting destructive rumors.
